

WAS MURDERED BY POLICEMAN

Scott Tarplee, Son of Local Man, Instantly Killed by Officer in Birmingham, Ala.

TWO BULLETS ENTERED BODY

James Tarplee, Father of Deceased, Returned Yesterday From South—Details of Shooting Affair.

James Tarplee, who was called to Birmingham, Ala., last Thursday on account of the murder of his son, Scott, has returned to this city and when seen today gave the details of the affair. According to Mr. Tarplee, his son was killed by Police Sergeant Buckalew of the Birmingham police force.

In speaking of the shooting Mr. Tarplee said: "Scott came home for dinner as usual Thursday and seemed in the best of humor, but the first thing he said to his wife was that he had been informed she had made an application for a position as stenographer. She had often said to Scott 'let us get someone to take care of the children so that I can work and help get a home,' but he would never consent, so devoted was he to them. No doubt Scott had worked himself up to that belief that her denial was not satisfactory, and as she told me he was not himself for he got his suit case and began to pack his clothes, saying that if she was going to work he was going to leave. Naturally Mrs. Tarplee got excited and a next-door neighbor called the police, telling them that a man was killing his wife, but in fact he did not touch her nor make any threats."

The officer was ordered away but refused to go and Scott wanting to get away from him took the back way. They met two blocks from the house. Scott was behind a telephone pole with his revolver drawn. According to eye witnesses, Scott asked the officer to throw his gun away and they would talk it over and threw his gun ten feet from the pole and walked over to a veranda and sat down. The police opened fire, shooting Scott through the breast and as he fell, shot the second time, the ball going through his neck."

The following from a Birmingham paper will be of interest:

Mrs. Scott L. Tarplee widow of the young man who was killed Thursday afternoon by Police Sergeant Buckalew, said last night:

"There was never a better husband than Mr. Tarplee, and he always treated me with the utmost love and respect. To wait upon me and to give me pleasure seemed to be his one greatest pleasure. His one thought in life was of me and the children."

"As to there being any trouble in our little family, there has never been any and our fireside circle was as bright as any in the land. I loved him and the children loved him and he loved us."

"I believe that there was no cause for him to be killed, and I think that he was murdered outright, but to God I leave the punishment. I have no malice in my heart for the man who did it, and it is not my intention and I would not for the world destroy his home as he has destroyed mine. I pleaded with him to go and leave Mr. Tarplee alone; that I did not call for a policeman; that I had no cause to call one; that I would guarantee that Mr. Tarplee would give no one any trouble whatever, and that there was no use arresting him."

"However, he would not listen to me, but seemed imbued with a mania to arrest Mr. Tarplee. He said 'If he ever comes out of that house I will take him dead or alive. He has

HAS A RIVAL SKUNK STORY

Shelby County Man Goes Frank Scudder "One Better."

George Mohr of Moral township brought a skunk story to the city with him that is a worthy rival of the ones recently related by Frank Scudder near Manilla, says the Shelbyville Democrat. Mr. Mohr stated that Elmer Bales, while out on a rabbit hunt near Pleasant View, captured eight skunks from a hollow limb in an elm tree. Five of the cats were of the star variety and three of the narrow stripe. Without even being put to the trouble of skinning them, Mr. Bales sold the skunks to Cecil Drake for $13.50. The den of cats was discovered when Mr. Bales' dog chased one of the animals into the hollow limb.

WORTH OF FORCE IS DEMONSTRATED

Postoffice Employees Handle Christmas Mail up to Minute and all is Delivered.

RURAL ROUTE MAIL DELAYED

The efficiency of the Rushville postoffice force was fully demonstrated by the manner in which the heavy Christmas mail was handled here. Every piece of Christmas mail received up until late Christmas morning was delivered to the proper places and Rushville people had the extreme pleasure of receiving packages on time. All of the mail received up until Sunday evening was delivered so that the office was clear for the Christmas day rush. Every piece of mail received Christmas day was delivered yesterday. Bert Conde, substitute carrier, worked steadily all day Sunday and Christmas day. The regular carriers worked until noon yesterday and the postoffice was open until ten o'clock in the morning. People over the county were not so fortunate as the rural carriers left yesterday morning before the early mails were received here because the trains were all very late.

TESTIFIES BEFORE THE GRAND JURY

EMPLOYED BY ARCHITECTS

William McGuire of Indianapolis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McGuire of North Morgan street, was summoned to appear before the Marion county grand jury in Indianapolis today to testify in the Prest-O-Lite building crash inquiry which is being conducted by that body. Mr. McGuire was superintendent of construction and employed by the architects of the building who drew the plans. Mr. McGuire feels that the blame lies wholly with the contractor and that misplacement of forms in making the concrete building is responsible for the terrible disaster recently when nineteen workmen were killed and several were injured. He was summoned Friday.

Juvenile smoking has great increased lately, and its effect will be most noticeable on the next generation.

EAGER CHILDREN ARE MADE HAPPY

SCRAMBLE AROUND WAGONS

Delivery is Finished by Noon and the Youngsters Munch Candy and Nuts All Afternoon.

The Daily Republican Santa Claus fund carried happiness into over one hundred and fifty homes yesterday morning and the smile that won't rub off for several days appeared on the faces of the three hundred or more youngsters whose Christmas would have been desolate had it not been for the fund.

Each of the three hundred children received at least two gifts, and in some cases more, an orange, a half pound box of good candy and a half pound of nuts. All children two years of age and under that received only a doll and it was one which they can enjoy for some time because it will not break. The dolls were fully dressed.

The boys ranging in age from three to five years were each given some sort of a toy and a game. Of course, in selecting the toys and games it was always remembered that they were to be enjoyed by boys alone. The girls ranging in age from three to five received a dressed doll and an appropriate toy. The girls between six and nine years of age received a toy and a dressed doll also. The boys of the same age were given a game and an iron toy of some kind. The boys between ten and twelve years of age got a good book and two games that would be of interest to youths of that age. The girls of the same age received the same things only the gifts were selected in each instance with an idea of pleasing each class. There were a few girls from thirteen to fifteen years of age who were given the goods for nice dresses and a few worthy boys of this age were presented with reefer.

On a whole the fund's gifts this time were better selected and probably brought more real enjoyment than they ever have before. The buyers have become experienced and they now have an idea of about what will please the little people.

The happy and smiling faces of the little folks who greeted the men delivering the gifts yesterday were worth all of the hours that were put in to carry Christmas cheer into the homes of the unfortunates in the city. The kids in all parts of the city waited anxiously all Sunday night and Monday morning for the appearance of the Daily Republican Santa Claus. They heralded the approach of the wagons from a distance and jumped up and down and clapped their hands with glee when the word was passed along that Santa Claus was coming. When the wagon did arrive where a crowd of youngsters had gathered, the men on the wagons worked with difficulty as they jammed and pushed each eager to get his bundle.

There was one pathetic incident noted in the eastern part of the city, but the children who thought they had been forgotten received a nice big bundle at the eleventh hour and were happier than they would have been had they received it in the first place. At one home there was only one bundle. It was carried in and three expectant little folks crowded to the door, each expecting to have their one wish gratified. But the two older ones were bound to be disappointed. Over on another street the two youngsters appeared again to see if their gifts had been found. When they were informed they had not, the big tears began to push their way out.

ARMY GIVES OUT OVER 300 MEALS

Local Corps More Than Reaches Goal Set For Christmas Day a Few Weeks Ago.

102 FAMILIES ARE VISITED

Christmas Treat For One Hundred Children Will be Given at the Church Wednesday Night.

The Salvation Army more than reached its goal set for Christmas day. The local corps gave out more than five hundred dinners yesterday, which it set out to do a few weeks ago. The corps feels that all credit is due to Rushville people who have so kindly assisted by donating much of the food and clothing and money to buy necessities.

Wednesday night the Army will give its annual Christmas treat to the children of the church. It is estimated by the captain that over a hundred children will be made happy with the presents that are being provided for them.

The Army is accepting contributions to give away at the Pearl street church Wednesday night. Any old toys or clothing that will interest or be of benefit to children will be gladly accepted by the local corps and they will call for it if notified. Their telephone number is 3488.

There were one hundred and two baskets given out by the Army yesterday and they averaged about five dinners to the basket. There were ten in some families while some were much smaller.

Each basket contained enough to make a good Christmas dinner. In every one was a large chicken, sugar, coffee, apples, canned fruit, jelly, two loaves of bread and potatoes. To some of the larger and more needy families a sack of flour was given.

FILE EXPENSE STATEMENT

Election Costs Isom Stevens One Box of Cigars.

Seven candidates in the recent election of road supervisors have filed election expenses with the county clerk. Only two of the men showed the expenditure of any money and none made any promises. Isom Stevens spent $1.90 for a box of cigars and James Perkins paid twenty-five cents for cleaning a room. The others who spent no money are Albert Bowles, James Stewart, John F. McKee and J. J. Clifton.

Some of the largest potatoes ever seen in Iowa were produced in Bremer county and sold at Waverly. George Vossley sold a load to Terry & Zoller, and several weighed five pounds each. He picked out fifteen that weighed a bushel, sixty pounds.

COMMEMORATE BIRTH OF JESUS

CANTATA IS VERY PLEASING

"The Light Eternal" is Sung Even Though Two Principals Are Unable to Appear.

Christmas was observed in the churches of Rushville Saturday night and Sunday with more reverence and with programs more conducive to the spirit of the day which commemorates the birth of Christ than in many previous years. All of the churches had special music and special sermons, and in two churches additional programs were rendered.

Probably the most auspicious of the number was that at the Main Street Christian church on Sunday night. A crowd that almost filled the main auditorium and the Sunday school room of the church was attracted by the tuneful cantata, "The Light Eternal," which was sung by the church choir under the direction of J. Walter Wilson.

The cantata was not marred in the least even though the two principal soloists in the cantata were taken ill with the gripe and were unable to appear. This misfortune befell B. F. Miller and Mrs. M. R. McDaniel, who had most of the soprano and tenor work in the cantata. Their parts were carried out perfectly however, by Miss Florence Frazee and Hale Pearsey, who had very little opportunity to rehearse.

Miss Frazee was not informed that she was to take the part of Mrs. McDaniel until Sunday and she had little time to prepare for the emergency. She rehearsed it a bit Sunday evening before the program began and sang so well that no one would have known she was taking the place of Mrs. McDaniel had the program not been published.

She sang Mrs. McDaniel's part in the quartet, "He Shall Feed His Flock," and Mr. Pearsey sang B. F. Miller's part. The other parts were taken by Miss Georgia Wyatt and J. Walter Wilson. Miss Frazee sang also Mrs. McDaniel's solo, "The People That Walked in Darkness."

Especially commendable was the work of Hale Pearsey, who sang the tenor parts of B. F. Miller with scarcely any rehearsal whatever. He has a very fine tenor voice which added much to the beauty of the cantata. Besides singing Mr. Miller's part in the quartet, he sang the solo, "And There Were Shepherds," which had been rehearsed by Mr. Miller. He sang also the duet, "Room in My Heart For Thee," with Mrs. Carl Behr.

The work of Mrs. Behr, who was one of the soloists, was especially worthy of mention. Her full round contralto voice was most beautiful when she sang the solo, "The Virgin's Lullaby" and was assisted by the choir. Her voice and that of Mr. Pearsey blended beautifully when they sang the duet. On the whole the cantata was a very creditable entertainment and it was much enjoyed.

A specially prepared Christmas program was carried out at the St. Paul M. E. church. The Rev. W. H. Wylie told "The Christmas Story" at the evening hour of worship and the story was illustrated with stereopticon views. A good crowd was in attendance. In the morning he preached on the topic, "The Star and the Wise Men."

At the United Presbyterian church the Rev. A. W. Jamieson preached two sermons appropriate to the season Sunday. The Rev. John B. Meacham preached Sunday morning on the subject, "Bethlehem's Cradle" and in the evening "Calvary's Cross." Both services at all of the churches were well attended. Sunday morning the Rev. J. F. Arvin preached at the First Baptist church on the subject "The Birth of Christ" and at night "Jacob's Bethel."

Three of the Sunday schools gave entertainments Saturday night, the United Presbyterian and the Christian church children both singing cantatas. There was a Christmas tree at the Presbyterian church and gifts were distributed. The First Baptist entertainment was held Friday night.

DEATH TAKES MRS. RUSSELL PUBLOW

IS WELL KNOWN YOUNG WOMAN

The funeral services of Mrs. Zella Publow, who died suddenly Saturday morning at her home near Carthage were held this morning in the Friends church in Carthage, conducted by the Rev. J. Edgar Williams.

Mrs. Publow was found dead on the floor of her home by Mr. Publow about eleven o'clock Saturday morning. The coroner's inquest showed that death was due to an ulcer of the stomach. Her death came as a great shock to her many friends as Mrs. Publow seemed to have the best of health. On the night before she attended choir practice in Carthage and had planned to entertain her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Bundy of near Greenfield, at her home yesterday. Mrs. Publow was twenty years old and had been married eight months.

Besides her parents, she is survived by two brothers, Roy Bundy of Cleveland, Ohio, and Leonard Bundy and one sister, Thelma.

AUTOS AND HORSE IN PECULIAR MIX-UP

Ollie Offutt's Car Collides With Animal and is Hit From Behind in Next Instant.

SCARCELY ANY DAMAGE DONE

An automobile driven by Dr. A. G. Shauck of Arlington, county coroner, ran into the back end of Ollie Offutt's machine after his car had collided with a horse and buggy on the pike between here and Milroy. That no one was hurt and no damage done is considered miraculous when it is considered what a perilous position all of the principals were in. The man driving the horse was asleep and Offutt's machine ran directly into it before he realized what had happened. The hood of the car hit the animal in the breast and it was hurled up on the front of the car. To add to the predicament, Dr. Shauck's automobile butted into Offutt's from behind. Dr. Shauck was trailing the other machine and was so close he could not avoid the collision. The occupant of the buggy was not hurt and the horse was only slightly scratched due to Offutt's running slowly. The front of the auto Dr. Shauck was driving was damaged very little and the windshield was broken.

Flies are the main cause for the spread of typhoid fever, cholera infantum and all the disease of children that are called "summer complaints."

COLLEGE HEADS TO CONFER HERE

President of Educational Institutions Under Supervision of U. P. Church to Hold Conference Here.

TO ARRANGE FOR FINANCES

College Presidents Will be Requested to Meet Citizens of Rushville Tomorrow Night.

The presidents of the colleges, universities and theological seminaries under the supervision of the United Presbyterian church of America will hold a conference here tomorrow with Dr. W. T. Campbell, father of Mrs. A. W. Jamieson, and secretary of the board of education of the church, as has been announced previously, to regulate better the financial benefits which the educational institutions receive from the church.

As had been planned the noted educators who will be gathered here will be asked to give an hour of their time to the people of Rushville tomorrow night. The Rev. A. W. Jamieson hoped, as soon as he received the news of their coming, that it could be arranged for the citizens of the city to meet the college presidents and enjoy a social hour with them.

It is believed that this would be especially desired by college graduates and former college people of Rushville, who know something of college life and appreciate how much men of this class serve to mould the coming generations of America. But not only college people are urged to come if the public meeting can be arranged. It is desired by the Rev. Mr. Jamieson that every one who wishes come and enjoy the hour at the United Presbyterian church.

The Rev. Mr. Jamieson said today: A request will be presented to these educators when they convene tomorrow, to give our citizens an opportunity to meet them, from 8 o'clock until 9 o'clock, tomorrow evening in the United Presbyterian church, corner Harrison and Seventh streets. It is believed that they will be glad to comply with the request, and all citizens and friends are invited to spend that hour with them. It is especially hoped that all who are in any way interested in college life will come out and meet these college men."

The men who will be here tomorrow in conference with Dr. Campbell are: Dr. R. M. Russell, president of Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa.; Dr. J. Knox Montgomery, president of Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio; Dr. T. H. McMichael, president of Monmouth College, Monmouth, Ill.; Dr. J. A. Thompson, president of Tarkio College, Tarkio, Mo.; Dr. Ross T. Campbell, president of Cooper College, Sterling, Kansas; Dr. Russell Graham, professor in Monmouth College and member of the board of education; Dr. D. A. McClenahan, president of Allegheny Theological Seminary, Pittsburg, Pa.; and Dr. Joseph Kyle, president of Xenia Theological Seminary, Xenia, Ohio.

The conference which will be held here was to have been called in Chicago, but Dr. Campbell is so feeble that it was not deemed advisable for him to travel that far. He is spending the winter at the Jamieson home. Dr. Campbell will entertain the distinguished guests at dinner tomorrow.

THE WEATHER

Snow or rain tonight. Colder on Wednesday and generally fair with a cold wave.

SAGE TEA WILL DARKEN THE HAIR

Restore Faded and Gray Hair to Natural Color—Dandruff Quickly Removed.

There is nothing new about the idea of using sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our great-grandmothers kept their locks soft, dark and glossy by using a "sage tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance they made a brew of sage leaves and applied it to their hair, with wonderfully beneficial effect. Nowadays we don't have to resort to old-time, tiresome methods of gathering the herbs and making the tea. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves, and all we have to do is to call for the ready-made product, Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, containing sage in the proper strength, with the addition of sulphur, another old-time scalp remedy. The manufacturers of this remedy authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented. Don't neglect your hair. Get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur today, and notice the difference after a few days' use. This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special Agents, Hargrove and Mullin.

Smoke FAIR PROMISE 5c Cigars.

To the Farmers of Rush County After a long and continued effort we have been able to secure Hog Cholera Serum in large quantities and we are prepared now to fill all orders promptly. We have done in the last ninety days over 5000 head. DRS. DAVIS AND KIGIN.

SAYS INDIANA IS GARDEN OF EDEN AND PAWPAW'S FRUIT THAT CAUSED TROUBLE

Entomologist at Purdue University Experiment Station Has Theory to Prove These Facts.

ORIGINAL PLEASURE PARKS

Indiana as the original Garden of Eden and the pawpaw, or Indiana banana, as the fruit that caused all the trouble in that prehistoric pleasure park, is a theory that adapts itself very readily to the belief of Professor James Troop, entomologist at the Purdue university experiment station. At any rate, he is sure that the fruit Eve found so pleasant to her taste that she had to invite her susceptible spouse to partake of it with her, was not one whit more attractive than the fruit which can be grown in the back yard of every Indiana home with a little effort and conformity to certain scientific principles. "It is a splendid fruit for home use," declared the entomologist. It has a great variety of flavors, some sweet and delicious, while others are coarse and not especially desirable, but are, nevertheless, more enjoyable than many of our other wild fruits, such as the persimmon."

In a recent interview, Professor Troop described the ease with which commercial persimmon growing could be made profitable in Indiana, and he finds many points of similarity between the two fruits. "The native pawpaw, which is a member of the family of fruits popularly called the 'custard-apple family,'" he says, "is also found growing in the woods, where there is plenty of shade, but the depletion of the natural forests of the state has caused a great scarcity. Unlike the persimmon, however, it does not grow successfully from seeds planted in the open ground, where exposed to sunshine, and for this reason, greater care must be taken in its cultivation. But any good, strong, rich soil that is not too wet will grow good pawpaws, and the owners of even a few trees may, in a few years, consider himself particularly fortunate."

The fruit is now found growing wild in various sections from Kansas to Pennsylvania and from Michigan to the gulf, the southern species, technically known as asimina grandiflora, being unusually large and delicious.

The Indiana variety may be called either a tree or a shrub, as it often attains a height of from twenty to thirty feet. When grown in clusters, however, it becomes shrubby and does not reach to more than fifteen in height. Hoosiers who have spent much of their time in the woods of the state have been particularly interested in its flowers, often more than two inches in diameter, at first greenish in color, then changing to a purplish red with a yellow center.

"Aside from its value as a common wild fruit," Professor Troop was asked, "to what use can it be put?"

"The housewife who once begins its use can readily answer that question. The fruit, when fully ripe, has a yellow or white flesh of the consistency of custard," explained Professor Troop. "This occasions its popular name 'custard apples.' Some people prefer to eat it from the hand, without any accompaniments, but it is also excellent when eaten with cream and sugar, and is often used in making a delicious marmalade or fruit pudding. It may also be dried and kept almost indefinitely—and, incidentally, there is the possibility that its propagation would result in the elimination of the very delectable but vigorously condemned 'boarding house prunes.'"

Professor Troop points out, however, that the fruit is seldom used for commercial purposes because of the rapidity with which it spoils after being picked. It may be kept for some time in a cool place if picked before it is ripe, but this results in a loss of considerable flavor.

"There is a widespread ignorance of the period in which the trees bear fruit," added the entomologist. "The common belief is that frost is necessary to ripen the fruit, but as in the case of the Indiana persimmon, this is entirely wrong. In central Indiana some varieties begin to ripen in September, others in October, but some of the later species will hang on the trees until early winter."

Professor Troop says that owing to the difficulty of transplanting and grafting it is better to sow seeds.

"Ample protection must be given the tree during the early years of its growth. This can be done by taking ripe fruit and selecting good seeds. These are then placed, two or three in a hill, similar to the method used in planting melons, and covered two or three inches deep. A barrel should then be taken, both heads knocked out, and this placed around the hills to protect the young seedlings from accident of shade until the trees are able to take care of themselves. A growth of six or eight inches should result during the first two years, and in six or eight years an abundant yield should be secured."

Professor Troop, in closing, stated that no delay should be permitted in the saving of the pawpaw. "Of course," he says, "there are a few people who, because of its aromatic flavor, will not be attracted, but those who avail themselves of the excellent opportunity offered them will find in the Indiana pawpaw additional means for lowering their household expenses in a very practicable and satisfying way. A few trees planted quite close together in the back yard will produce all the fruit a family can use, besides helping out very materially from an ornamental standpoint."

AMUSEMENTS

The first of the genuine hits of the season which the West has seen, is James K. Hackett and his splendid company in Louis Evan Shipman's dramatization of David Graham Phillips' celebrated novel, "The Grain of Dust," which will come to English's opera house, Indianapolis, on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 29 and 30, including a Saturday matinee. As a book, "The Grain of Dust" was read by a great number of people and as a play it is packing the theaters of the country just as Mr. Hackett used to do with "The Crisis," and some of his other notable successes. Supporting Mr. Hackett will be E. M. Holland, one of the big men of the stage. He has been seen here many times before. Then there is Frazer Coulter, Frank Burbeck, Charles Stedman, Vaughan Trevor, Fred Sullivan and Daniel Jarrett, Jr., among the men, and Izetta Jewel, Olive Harper Thorne, Pauline Neff and Mabel Inslee in the women's roles. With such a cast it would be a hard matter for any play to fall down, but in this instance the drama is in every way up to the strength of the company presenting it.

RUSSIA ENTERS UPON REVENGE

Merciless Campaign Begun In Persia.

500 KILLED IN GOLD BLOOD

According to Unofficial Reports Received at London the Russian Troops at Tabriz Have Begun a War of Revenge Which Found an Outlet in Wholesale Massacre of Men and the Violation of the Women.

London, Dec. 26.—According to Persian dispatches received here, Russia has begun a merciless campaign of revenge in the shah's domains against the Fidsais. It is hard to get at the exact truth, and it is still a matter of doubt whether the Oriental imagination has not been at work in the reports which have been received of a massacre at Tabriz and the violation of Persian women. There is a report that 500 Persians were killed in cold blood, but this is not clear. At any rate the situation seems to be of the blackest.

From Persian sources it is stated positively that the outbreak at Tabriz was due to the aggression of the Russians. It is added that the natives were told not to retaliate under any circumstances. After the fighting overtures were made to the Russians, but these were ignored and the slaughter continued. Russian reports, on the other hand, insist there was heavy fighting, during which the czar's forces lost heavily. Resht and Enzeli are reported to be quiet now, but they are said to be smoldering with suppressed excitement.

EARNST FIGHTERS

The Fidsais Are Putting Up a Determined Resistance.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 26.—The fighting at Tabriz, Persia, now is reported to have been of a severe nature and the situation is still alarming. The Russian foreign office says that it has received no details of the recent battle, but it is admitted that the Russian losses were considerable. The Russian minister at Teheran telegraphs that the Persian government has sent stern orders to the local governor at Tabriz to suppress disorder.

It is said that the Russian consul, M. Mueller, at Tabriz, who was asked by the Russian commander there to leave under an escort, declined to do so and remains at his post. He telegraphed last night that the fighting continues. The Russian commander, Colonel Chaplin, sends word that the Fidsais are putting up the stiffest kind of a fight and that he has had great difficulties to contend with.

Martial Law at Teheran.

Teheran, Dec. 26.—The regent, with the support of the cabinet, is in control of the situation and is holding the people down by force. The newspapers have been suppressed and martial law has been proclaimed. The result is that the members of the melliss and the populace are infuriated. Their anger has been added to by the dismissal of Shuster from his post as director of finances. The people, however, are powerless. The Persian vice governor at Tabriz reports that Persian women and children are being massacred there in cold blood by the Russians.

CAUGHT ON BRIDGE

One Son Killed When Family Was Overtaken by a Trolley Car.

Greencastle, Ind., Dec. 26.—A boy was killed and his mother seriously hurt when an interurban car surprised Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter and their two sons on the bridge across Walnut creek near this city.

The Hunter family had intended to visit relatives at Stop 23 on the interurban line. They were carried beyond their destination and were walking back at the time the accident occurred. When half way across the bridge the family saw the approaching car round the curve ahead. Mr. Hunter told his wife and children to lie down at the edge of the bridge, just outside the rails. The elder boy, John Hunter, Jr., disregarded his father's warning and was struck and thrown from the bridge.

Mrs. Hunter lay too close to the tracks and was struck on the hip and seriously injured. She will recover. Mr. Hunter and the younger son were uninjured.

Life Prisoner Paroled.

Columbia, S. C., Dec. 26.—George W. Ennis, aged seventy-five, a soldier of Sherman's army when it swept through the south in 1865, was paroled from the penitentiary here by Governor Blease on condition that he leave the state in twenty-four hours. He was serving a life sentence for arson. He is a native of Indiana, and will go to relatives who live near Indianapolis.

Chopped Negro to Death.

Baltimore, Dec. 26.—King Davis, a negro, who shot and killed Frederick A. Schwab, white, at Fairfield, was taken from the Brooklyn (Md.) jail and killed by a mob. Davis was chopped to death with hatchets.

Looking over the "Readers Index of Periodical Literature" the other day, we noted the impressive array of articles about women. This catalog, as many people know, is an index of all the articles published in over 100 leading magazines. The last four years index contains an astonishing list of 22 pages in fine type, cataloging the articles about women, including "Woman Suffrage," "Employment for Women" and the like. Turning back to the heading "Men" with accompanying sub-heads, we found that the articles under these captions took only a half page.

Which seems to indicate that the magazine editors of the United States and England find that articles on the specific activities of women draw just 22 times as many readers as articles on the specific activities of men.

A very large proportion of this enormous mass of literature deals with the efforts and successes of women in occupations formerly closed to them. When one looks at the strapping girls turned out by colleges, and at the puny men in the stores and offices of a great city, even jobs supposed to require physical strength will not be reserved to one sex indefinitely where such work brings attractive rewards.

The Christmas toy giving season is annually the occasion of much fine spun argument among moralists concerning the influence of toys.

A few years ago it was seriously argued that the prevalence of the Teddy bear was destroying the maternal instinct among girls. To this it might be replied, that as wicked nurses and heartless parents long held the child heart in terror by threats that the bears would eat them up, so a social service was rendered when the youngsters were persuaded to look at the bear as a friend. This may be regarded as particularly true, now that a cultivation of antipathy for bears is no longer necessary for the survival of the race.

An American Rabbi some years ago tried to persuade the Nuremberg toy makers to give up making tin soldiers, which he felt tended to love of militarism. However, admiration of soldier life is a disease every boy catches, and it may be useful to get it over early like the measles.

The serious misfortune of Toyland is that so many parents of small means feel that they must buy expensive toys to make the children happy. After all it is the simple toy that lasts. In a few days the $5 mechanical steam boat will be in the ink barrel, while the boy will be playing his 25 cent cart. And the doll the little girl takes to bed is not the French creation that winks and smiles, but ugly old Hannah, the home made darling of rags.

GONGAY NOT TO BE COMPARED TO THIS

African Wild Beast Still Roams Near Clarksburg But Another Vicious Beast is Discovered.

ARMORED HUNTER SLAYS IT

It now seems that Billie Boyle's African gongay will have to take a back seat for a while at least, especially in the vicinity of Clarksburg, where one of this tribe of terrible creatures was reported to have been at large some days ago.

The story now comes from Clarksburg to the effect that the strange, sneaking beast that has been terrorizing that community and which the natives had pretty good evidence was one of Mr. Boyle's celebrated and State-famous gongays is instead a big Bob-cat. The beast was shot and killed by Hayes Linville, and is now on exhibition in a store in Clarksburg. It was a vicious brute, large for one of its kind, and measures forty-three inches. The chances are, had it and the gongay met there would have been something doing in the fight line.

STILL CHANCE FOR GRAND PRIZE

Community Has Opportunity of Making Largest Per Capita Sale of Red Cross Seals.

TO BE PUSHED NEXT WEEK

Many Agents in Indiana Adopt the Slogan "No Unsold Seals"—Jan. 1, Closing Date.

The community selling the largest number of Red Cross Christmas seals between Christmas and January 1 will stand a good chance of making the largest per capita sale and of winning the grand prize offered by the State Commission.

This announcement was made today by the Indiana sales managers following the report from a number of agents that they expected to give some of the self-confident cities a run for first place by pushing the sale next week. Some cities have already sold several seals per inhabitant, and had intended to quit selling today until the announcement was made that agents in some communities intended to continue the sale until January 1. Then they called their workers together again and planned for the work next week.

Other agents in Indiana have adopted the slogan "no unsold seals" and expect to sell all seals on hand before New Year's day. According to an agreement with the State headquarters all seals remaining unsold by the first of the year may be returned to the State bureau in Indianapolis. Following an agent's suggestion that he intended to ask each person in his locality to be individually responsible for the purchase of one or more seals, others accepted the idea, so that next week all will be given an opportunity to assist in the campaign against tuberculosis by buying Red Cross seals.

"The Skating Bug's Dream" is the title of an Imp comedy at the Palace tonight. This film is said to be a very spectacular production and several amusing scenes are shown. A sensational Rex drama entitled "Sherlock Holmes" is the other picture. The performance tonight is for the benefit of the Phi Delta Kappa fraternity and a large number of tickets have already been sold. Next Tuesday and Wednesday nights, "Romeo and Juliet" in two reels will be the feature attraction.

The Portola will have the usual change of program tonight, showing two reels of pictures. "The Two Fugitives" is an Essanay western drama. "The Exclusive Hat" is a Lubin comedy. Friday and Saturday nights, "The Tale of Two Cities" will be the attraction. This picture is well known here and proved popular the first time it was shown and the return engagement will be welcomed by patrons of the silent drama.

The Princess will show two comedy pictures tonight. The first, "Kitty and the Cowboys" is a Vitagraph film. The picture is a wild western side-splitter and tells a clever story of ranch life. "Fatty" gets even with the other cowboys and does it in a very comical way. The other picture is an Edison film, "Mike's Hero." A Selig feature attraction, "Lost in the Jungle" is booked for an early appearance at this theater.

ONE CHILD NOT LOCATED.

Of the three hundred bundles delivered by The Daily Republican Santa Claus fund wagons Christmas day, the proper places were found with two exceptions. This is far better than ever has been done in past years when three or four were never located. One family, it was discovered yesterday, had moved since the lists were prepared, but the three children in this home have since been found and their bundles were delivered today. It was impossible, however, to find little Rose Letchner, whose address given was 631 West Tenth street. There is no such name in the city directory. The child or her parents may have the bundle by calling at The Daily Republican office.

OYSTER FAMINE CHRISTMAS DAY

Demand is Greater Than Local Supply and Many Dinners go Without Usual Dressing.

SCARCITY OF FRUIT ALSO

There was an oyster and fruit famine in Rushville Christmas day and in many homes Christmas dinner was eaten without the usual oyster dressing. An oyster could not be purchased in this city yesterday morning. The demand was so much larger than usual that the supply on hands was soon exhausted. The fruit famine did not last long and was relieved about noon when a large consignment of oranges and bananas was received over the I. & C. All of the oranges and bananas at local grocery stores and fruit stands were sold out late Saturday night and none could be bought until the fresh supply arrived.

CHAPTER I.

A still and sultry dusk had fallen, closing an oppressive, weary day; one of those days whose sole function seems to reside in rendering us irritably conscious of our too-close castings of too-solid flesh; whose humid and inert atmosphere, sodden with tepid moisture, clings palpably to the body, causing men to feel as if they crawled, half-suffocated, at the bottom of a sea of rarefied water.

The hour may have been eight; it may have been not quite that, but it was almost dark. The windows were oblong, black as night in the yellow walls of O'Rourke's bedroom in the Hotel d'Orient, Monte Carlo.

I have the honor to make known to you the O'Rourke of Castle O'Rourke in the county of Galway, Ireland; otherwise and more widely known as Colonel Terence O'Rourke; a chevalier of the Legion of Honor of France; sometime an officer in the Foreign Legion in Algiers; a wanderer, spendthrift, free-lance, cosmopolitan—a gentleman-adventurer, he's been termed.

He was dressing for dinner. The glare of half a dozen electric bulbs discovered him all but ready for public appearance—not, however, quite ready. In his shirt sleeves he faced a chevalier, pluckily (if with the haggard eye of exasperation) endeavoring to outmaneuver a demon of inanimate perversity which had entered into his dress tie, inciting it to refuse to assume, for all his coaxing and his stratagems, that effect of nonchalant perfection so much sought after, so seldom achieved.

Patently was the thing possessed by a devil; O'Rourke made no manner of doubt of that. Though for minutes at a time he fumbled, fidgeted, fumed, it was without avail.

His room itself was in a state of considerable disorder—something due mainly to O'Rourke's characteristic efforts to find just what he might happen to desire at any given time without troubling to think where it ought properly to be.

Something of this confusion, mirrored in the glass, was likewise reflected in O'Rourke's eyes, what time he paused for breath and profanity. "Faith, 'tis worse than a daw's nest, the place," he admitted, scandalized. "How ever did I—one lone man—do all that, will ye be telling me?" He thrust out two helpless baffled hands, and let them fall. After a meditative pause he added: "Damn that Alsatian!"—with reference to his latest and least competent valet, who had but recently been discharged with a sea in his ear and a month's unearned wage in his pocket. "For knowing me ways," sighed O'Rourke, "there was never anyone like the like of Danny."

For as many as three live-long days this man had been reduced to the necessity of dressing himself with his own fair hands—and that at least thrice daily, who did nothing by halves. And, somehow, mysteriously, the discarded garments had for the most part remained where he had thrown them, despite the earnest efforts of the femme de chambre to restore something resembling order from this man-made chaos. For servants all liked well the O'Rourke, imprudent soul that he was, freehanded to a fault.

You are invited to picture to yourself O'Rourke as invariably he was a one of his not infrequent but ever transient phases of affluence: that is, a very magnificent figure indeed, standing a bit over six feet, deep of chest and lean of flank, with his long, straight legs he looked what he had been meant to be, a man of arms and action. His head was shapely, its dark hair curling the least in the world; and, incredibly stained, a transparent brown, his features were lean, sharp, and rendered very attractive by quick, boyish eyes in whose warm blue-gray depths humor twinkled more often than not, though those same eyes were not seldom thoughtful, a trace wistful, perhaps, with the look of one who recalls dear memories, old friends and sweethearts, loved and lost. . . . For he had begun to live early in life and had much to look back upon, though for all that it's doubtful if he were more than thirty at the time he became involved in the fortunes of the Pool of Flame.

For the rest of him, barring the recalcitrant tie, the man was strikingly well groomed, while his surroundings spoke for comfortable circumstances. As the authority of the absent and regretted Danny, who had long served O'Rourke in the intimate capacities of body-servant, confidant and chamberlain of the exchequer (this last, of course, whenever there happened to be any exchequer to require a chamberlain), there was never anyone at all who could spend money or wear clothes like himself, meaning the master. And at this time O'Rourke was sensibly in funds and consequently (as the saying runs) cutting a wide swath. Heaven and himself only knew the limits of his resources; but his manner a Monte Cristo might have afforded advantage. His play was a wonder of the Casino; for the matter of that, his high-handed and extravagant ways had made the entire Principality of Monaco conscious of his presence in the land. And you fall in the least to understand the nature of the man if you think for a moment that it irked him to be admired, pointed out, courted, pursued. He was, indeed, never so splendid as when aware that he occupied the public eye. In short, he was just an Irishman.

So, then, it's nothing wonderful that he should seem a thought fickle about the set of his tie.

Now as he stood scowling at his image, and wishing from the bottom of his heart he had never been fool enough to let Danny leave him, and calling fervent blessings down upon the head of the fiend who first designed modern evening-dress for men—he found himself suddenly with a mind divested of any care whatever and attentive alone to a sound which came to him faintly, borne upon the heavy wings of the sluggish evening air. It was nothing more nor less than a woman singing softly to herself (humming would probably be the more accurate term), and it was merely the tune that caught his fancy; a bit of an old song he himself had once been wont to sing, upon a time when he had been a happier man. It seemed strange to hear it there, stranger still that the woman's voice, indistinct as it was, should have such a familiar ring in his memory. He frowned in wonder and shook his head. "The age of miracles is past," he muttered; "I would never be myself. I've had my chance—and forfeited it. 'Twill not come to me a second time. . . ."

The singing ceased. Of a sudden O'Rourke swore with needless heat, and, plucking away the offending tie, cast it savagely from him. "The devil fly away with ye!" he said. "Is it bent on driving me mad ye are? I'd give me fortune to have Danny back! . . . Me fortune—faith!" He laughed the word to bitter scorn. "Tis myself that never had the least of anything like that without 'twas feminine—with a 'mis' tacked onto the front of it!" And he strode away to the window to cool off.

It was like him to forget his exasperation in the twinkling of an eye; another mood entirely swayed him by the time he found himself gazing out into the vague, velvety dusk that momentarily was closing down upon the fairy-like panorama of terraced gardens and sullen, silken sea. His thoughts had winged back to that dear woman of whom that fragment of melody had put him in mind; and he was sighing and heavy of heart with longing for the sight of her and the touch of her hand.

Even as he watched, stark night fell, black as a pocket beneath a portentous pall of cloud. . . . Far out upon the swelling bosom of the Mediterranean a cluster of dim lights betrayed a stealthy coasting steamer.

making westward. Nearer, in the harbor, a fleet of pleasure craft, riding at anchor on the still, dark tide, was revealed in many faint, wraith-like shapes of gray, all studded with yellow stars. Ashore, endless festoons of colored lamps draped the gloom of the terraces; the facade of the Casino stood out lurid against the darkness; the hotels shone with reflected brilliance, the palace of the Prince de Monaco loomed high upon the peninsula, its elevations picked out with lines of soft fire.

The O'Rourke shook his head, condemning it all. "Tis beautiful," he said; "faith, yes! 'tis all of that. But I'm thinking 'tis too beautiful to be good for one—like some women I've known in me time. 'Tis not good for Terence—that's sure; 'tis the O'Rourke that's going stale and soft with all this easy living. . . . Me that has more than many another to live for and hope for and strive for! . . . And I'm lingering here in the very lap of luxury stuffing myself with rare food, befuddling myself with rarer wines—me that has fought a day and a night and a half a day atop

GLORIOUS, HAIR

For Every Woman Who Wants It.

Any woman who neglects her hair can not expect to have as lovely hair as the woman who doesn't.

Wash their hair once a week, use PARISIAN SAGE daily—keep your hair brush clean and in a few days you will give to your hair a beautiful lustre that you will be proud of.

PARISIAN SAGE is a most reliable hair tonic; so reliable that E. B. Johnson & Company guarantees it to eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp or money back. It should be used as a dressing by every member of the family because it keeps the scalp clean, prevents hair from turning gray and baldness. You will have no use for ordinary preparations after once giving delightful PARISIAN SAGE a trial.

of that on nothing and a glass of muddy water!—risking me money as if there was no end to it, throwing it away in scandalous tips like any drunken sailor! And all for the scant satisfaction of behaving like a fool of an Irishman. . . . 'Tis sickening—disgusting; naught less. . . . I'm thinking this night ends it, though; come the morning I'll be pulling up stakes and striking out for a healthier, simpler place, where there's something about a man can take an interest in without losing his self-respect. . . . I'll do just that, I will!"

This he meant, firmly, and was glad of it, with a heart immeasurably lightened by the strength of his good resolution. He began to hum the old tune that the unknown woman's voice had set buzzing in his brain, and broke off to snap his fingers defiantly at the Casino. "That for ye!" he flouted it—"sitting there with your painted smile and your cold eyes, like the brazen hussy ye are—Goddess of Chance, indeed!—thinking ye have but to bide your time for all men to come and render up their souls to ye! Here's once ye lose, madam; after this night I'm done with ye; not a sou of mine will ever again cross your tables. I'll have ye to understand the O'Rourke's a reformed character from the morning on!"

He laughed softly, in high feather with his conceit; and, thinking cheerfully of the days of movement and change that were to follow, the song in his heart shaped itself in words upon his lips.

"I'm Paddy Whack From Ballyhack, Not long ago turned soldier—O At grand attack, Or storm or sack, None than I will prove bolder—O!"

His voice was by way of being a tenor of tolerable quality and volume, but untrained—nothing wonderful. It was just the way he trotted out the rollicking stanza that rendered it infectious, irresistible. For as he paused the voice of the woman that had reminded him of the song capped the verse neatly.

"An' whin we get the route Wid a shout, How they shout! Wid a ready right-about Goes the bould soldier-boy!"

O'Rourke caught his breath, startled, stunned. "It can't be—" he whispered. For if at first her voice, subdued in distance, had stirred his memory with a touch as vague and thrilling as the caress of a woman's hand in darkness, now that he heard the full strength of that soprano, bell-clear and spirited, he was sure he knew the singer. He told himself that there could be no two women in the world with voices just like that; not another than her he knew could have rendered the words with so true a spirit, so rare a brogue—tinged as that had been with the faintest, quaintest exotic inflection imaginable.

But she had stopped with the verse half sung. His pulses quickening, O'Rourke leaned forth from the window and carried it on:

"O, 'tis thin the ladies fair In despair, Tear their hair! But—'Tis divvie a bit I care! Cries the bould soldier-boy!"

There fell a pause. He listened with his heart in his mouth, but heard nothing. And it seemed impossible to surmise whence, from which one of all the rooms with windows opening upon that side of the hotel, had come the voice of the woman. She might as well have been above as below him, or on either side; he could not guess. But he was determined.

Now there was beneath his window a balcony with a floor of wood and a rail of iron-filigree—a long balcony, extending from one corner of the hotel to the other. At intervals it was splashed with light from the windows of chambers still occupied by guests belated or busy, like himself, with the task of dressing for the evening. The window to his left was alight; that on his right, dark. With half his body on the balcony, his legs dangling within the room, O'Rourke watched the opening on his left with jealous, breathless expectancy. Not a sound came therefrom. He hesitated.

"If that weren't her room, I'd hear somebody moving about," he reasoned. "Tis frightened she is—not suspect—'tis me. . . . But how do I know 'tis herself? . . . Faith! could me ears deceive me?"

With that he took heart of hope and broke manfully into the chorus, singing directly to the lighted window, singing the first line with ardor and fervor, with confidence and with hope, singing persuasively, pleadingly, anx-

"For the world is all befo-ore us—" he sang and then paused. He heard no echo. And again he essayed, with that in his tone to melt a heart of ice:

"For the world is all befo-ore us—"

And now he triumphed and was lifted out of himself with sheer delight; for from the adjoining room came the next line:

"And landladies ado-ore us—"

Unable to contain himself, he chimed in, and in duet they sang it out to the rousing finale:

"They ne'er refuse to sco-ore us, But chalk us up wid joy We taste her tap, we tear her cap— 'O, that's the chap 'O, that's the chap 'For me!' cries she— 'Whiroo! Isn't he the darlint, the bould soldier boy!'"

As the last note rang out and died, the next window was darkened; the woman had switched off the lights. He heard a faint rustle of silken ruffles. "Tis herself," he declared in an agony of anticipation—"herself and none other! And I'm thinking she'll be coming to the window now—"

He was right. Abruptly he discovered her by the reflected glow from the illumination behind him. He was conscious of the pallid oval of her face, of a sleek white sheen of arms and shoulders, of a dark mass of hair, but more than all else of the glamour of eyes that shone into his softly, like limpid pools of darkness touched by dim starlight.

Inflamed, he leaned toward her. "Whist, darling!" he stammered. "Whist! 'Tis myself—'tis Terence!"

But she was gone. A low, stifled laugh was all his answer—that and the silken whisper of her skirts as she scurried from the window. He flushed crimson, waited an instant, then flung discretion to the winds, and found himself scrambling out upon the balcony. Heaven only knows to what lengths the man would have gone had not the slam of a door brought him up standing; she had left her room!

So she thought to escape him so easily! He swore between his teeth with excitement and tumbled back whence he had come. Regardless of the fact that he was still in his shirt-sleeves he rushed madly for the door. On the way a shooting-jacket on the door, perhaps in revenge for neglect and ill-treatment, maliciously wound it self around his feet and all but threw him headlong; only a frantic clutch at the footrail of the bed, saved him. Kicking the thing savagely off, he flung himself upon the door and threw it open. His jaw dropped.

The lift shaft was directly opposite. Before it, in more or less patient waiting, stood a very young and beautiful woman in a gown whose extreme candor was surpassed only by the perfection of its design and appointment—both blatant of the Rue de la Paix; a type as common to the cognoscenti of Monte Carlo as the Swiss hotel porters. But O'Rourke did not know her from Eve.

"The divvie!" said he beneath his

He was mistaken; but the young woman, at first startled by his unceremonious appearance, on instantaneous second thought decided to permit him to discover that twin imps, at least, resided in her eyes. And when his disappointment prevented him from recognizing them, her dawning smile was swiftly erased and her ascending eyebrows spoke eloquently enough of her haughty displeasure. Synchronously the lift hesitated at that lanthier and the gate clanged wide; the young woman would her skirt about her and showed him a back which at any other time would have evoked his unstinted admiration. Then the gate shot to with a rattle and bang, and the lift dropped out of sight, leaving the man with mouth agape and eyes as wide.

A beaming but elderly femme de chambre on duty in the corridor, remarking O'Rourke's pause of stupefied chagrin, hoped and believed he needed her services. She bore down upon him accordingly.

"M'sieu is desirous of—?"

He came out of his trance. "Nothing," he told her with acid brevity. "But, yes," he reconsidered with haste. "That lady who but this moment took the lift—her name?"

"Her name, m'sieu? Ma'm'selle Voltaire."

"Impossible!" he told himself aloud, utterly unable to force any connecting link between the lady in the lift and her whose voice had bewitched him. "But assuredly, m'sieu! Do I not know—I who have waited upon her hand and foot these three days and to whom she has not given as much as—that." The woman ticked a finger-nail against her strong white teeth. "Ma'm'selle Victorine Voltaire," she asserted stubbornly.

O'Rourke fumbled in his pocket and found a golden ten-franc piece, surrendering it to the woman as heedlessly as though it had been as many centimes. "I'll be leaving me room in five minutes, now. And do ye, for the love of Heaven, me dear, try to set me things the least trifle to rights. Will ye now, like the best little girl in the world?"

The best little girl in the world, who was forty-five if a day, promised miracles—with a bob of a courtesy. But so disgruntled was O'Rourke that he shut his door in her face.

"Tis myself that's the fool," he said savagely enough, "to think for a moment that ever again I'll set me eyes on her pretty face—God bless it, wherever she may be! . . . For why should I deserve to—I, the penniless adventurer?"

FEEDING THE RATS

A Calcutta correspondent reports a "truly horrible incident" which befell an English lady. Her "butler" was in the habit of calling loudly beneath her window every evening about 7. His cry suggested that he was calling either the cattle or the chickens home; but though she had neither, the lady for some time took no notice, until one evening, having the curiosity to look, she was horrified to see the butler, like a dusky plover, surrounded by a troop of rats. There were quite 50 of them, from the big bandicoots to small muskrats, all being fed on the remains of her soup, meat and other bits. In a plague country this was an amusement that was speedily ended.

ECHOES AT SEA

A dense or thick fog will obscure objects at a distance of 1,000 feet. The recent accident to an ocean steamer of the Anchor line illustrates the fact. An iceberg was run into as soon as seen. After the collision the passengers could hear the echo from their voices reflected by the walls of ice, though the iceberg was invisible to them. Otherwise, there are no echoes at sea.

Fast vessels are to sail between Cape Charles, which is said to be an 'ice free harbor,' and Liverpool."

What the Agricultural College Offers

By PROF. J. H. SKINNER, Dean of the Purdue School of Agriculture
Purdue University Agricultural Extension

The Student in the Four Year Course Is Taught to Discover for Himself the Truths Regarding the Physical, Chemical and Bacteriological Conditions of the Soil.

Agricultural colleges have provided courses varying in length from one week to four years. The entrance requirements for different courses, vary from the wide open door, or no specified requirements, to a four years' course in a commissioned high school. No one earnestly desiring to take an agricultural course need feel that he is barred, as work has been provided to meet the needs of those whose circumstances are such as to make it impossible to take the four year course. Any industrious young man of determination can obtain one of these courses in agriculture.

Many young men fail to take advantage of the work of the agricultural college and experiment station because of lack of information concerning the equipment used and the instruction given. The advantages of a course in agriculture cannot be appreciated unless one knows something of the equipment and instruction.

The modern agricultural college is a many sided institution with thousands of dollars invested in farm land, buildings, apparatus, live stock, and miscellaneous equipment. A very essential part of this equipment is the farm. These vary in size in different institutions from 240 to 1,200 or more acres. Usually a large portion of the farm is set apart for experimental plots, permanently laid out for field investigation. On these plots different crops are grown in great variety, the effect of different system of crop rotation, and different methods of soil improvement involving different fertilizers, manures and leguminous crops is studied. Other portions of the farm are given up to orchards, gardens, and small fruit culture; to live stock, poultry and dairy cattle. The herds and flocks found in barns and pastures must from the nature of the purpose which they serve, include representatives of many breeds of all classes of farm animals. The stock barns and poultry houses usually, where funds are available, typify the essentials of the best practical methods of housing stock and poultry, as well as afford conveniences for experimental and instructional work. In addition to the farm and its equipment of buildings, other buildings are provided which contain offices, class rooms and laboratories for instruction in soils, crops, horticulture, dairying, live stock and grain judging, veterinary work, farm machinery and cement work.

The experiment station, the university farm, the herds of pure bred cattle, sheep and swine, experimental poultry and fruit farm, all furnish excellent material for instructional purposes and give students opportunity to observe the best methods and practice in these lines. The instructional corps consists of men chosen from the best institutions in the country, for their knowledge and ability to investigate and teach scientific agriculture in a thorough practical way.

Methods of instruction differ in different courses. Students in the short courses deal with the practical problems of the farm in both class room and laboratory. They study the many questions of soil drainage, tillage, fertilization and the management and improvement of soils of different types, handle and study the judging and breeding, feeding, care and marketing of live stock and poultry; learn budging, grafting, spraying; test seeds, adjust and operate farm machinery, separate and test milk, make butter and operate creamery machinery. The purpose of such courses is to give the student an understanding of the principles of agriculture as well as to teach them how to get results, or in other words the "why and how" of the business.

Short courses have their place in every state, as many have not the time, money or schooling to enable them to take the longer course. However, one should not feel that a short course is as good or even to be compared with a course of two or four years. The longer time gives opportunity to do all that is undertaken in a short course in a much more thorough way and to do very much more. It not only enables one to go to the bottom of agricultural matters, but makes it necessary to have other tools to work with, such as chemistry, biology, physics, English, history, economics. (Such courses give the student a broad, well rounded education, that fits him, not only for agriculture, but in addition gives him the best kind of fundamental training for most any vocation.

SEED LABORATORY AT PURDUE

An Invaluable Help in Selecting the Proper Sort of Seed for Use in Indiana.

By G. M. FRIER, Small Seed Expert
Purdue University Agricultural Extension

The branch seed laboratory of the Bureau of Plant Industry Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., maintained in connection with the Agricultural Extension department of Purdue University, is now open, and is prepared to render effective service in the improvement of Indiana field crops, especially clovers, alfalfa, and the grasses.

There is now no question, but that the use of varieties of field crops suited to prevailing soil and climatic conditions, and of high grade seed of any such varieties, are of great importance in field crop production, other necessary conditions, such as good seed bed preparation, drainage, an abundant supply of plant food, etc., being also provided. To get a high grade of seed, that is one free or the nearly free of weed seeds or other such impurities, free or nearly free of inert matter, and at the same time possessing strong germinating power, the extensive use of the fanning mill at home or at the elevator, and the use of adequate purity and germination tests are strongly urged and recommended. Failure in these respects, in no small measure accounts for the so-called "running out" of certain crops, the extremely weedy condition prevailing over most of the farms of this state and even for the partial or complete failure of clover and other field crops. As an aid to seed dealers and farmers who are interested in handling and using a better quality of seed, so improving the quantity and quality of crops raised, the seed laboratory is maintained. This laboratory is mainly for the testing of the smaller seeds such as the clovers, alfalfa and the grasses, for purity and germination, and for the identification and naming of all kinds of seeds sent in. Reports as to the purity of samples submitted are sent out. These reports, among other things, show the kinds of weed seeds present in the sample, the amount of each impurity present, any adulterants which may be present, incidentally or purposely, to increase the profit on the sale of the seed. A germination report is also made. This indicates the strength and germination power of the seed in any sample submitted. These reports are sent out promptly. No charge is made for any test, examination, or identification made in the laboratory. A sample of clover, alfalfa, or grass seed, should consist of about four table-spoonfuls obtained if possible with a seed drawer, from top, middle, and bottom of the sacks or bins.

More extensive use of the seed laboratory and its facilities is hoped for this season. While the number of those who would use nothing but the best seed obtainable, is increasing, there are still far too many, who do not sufficiently appreciate the value and profitability of high grade seed. No one can afford to overlook the careful examination and testing of all seed used. In this way a purchaser can know just the quality and grade of the seed offered for sale and can accept or reject according to the quality of the goods offered. The public generally is urged to take the fullest advantage of the assistance the seed laboratory, now open, is capable of rendering along the line of better seed and better crops. ### CLARA BARTON

Founder of American Red Cross Society Is Ninety Years Old.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Christmas greetings and congratulations upon her ninetieth anniversary were simultaneously poured in upon Miss Clara Barton, founder of the American National Red Cross. Miss Barton was the cheeriest of the circle which joined in a quiet Christmas celebration.

AGGRIEVED HUSBAND STIRRED TO FRENZY

Slays Relative Who Was Protecting Wife.

Toledo, O., Dec. 26.—From the effects of a gunshot wound in the abdomen, inflicted at the Stevenson home near Yellow Springs, Ohio, St. Clair Gentry, aged twenty-three, stepson of John B. Stevenson, former county commissioner and defeated candidate for delegate to the constitutional convention, is dead. Gentry's uncle, Robert Irvin, aged thirty-six, a gun inspector in the government navy yard at Philadelphia, fled after the shooting and has not been captured.

Stirred to frenzy by his failure to see his wife, from whom he had been separated for more than a year, the authorities charge, Irvin fired twice at Gentry, who was protecting the woman.

Irvin reached Yellow Springs from Philadelphia and in the evening went to the home of Stevenson, where his wife was visiting. Mrs. Irvin had come from Denver, Col., with her sister, Mrs. J. H. McRoy, with whom she has been living since breaking off relations with her husband. Mrs. Stevenson is also a sister of the two women and the three planned to hold their first reunion in several years during the holidays.

When Irvin reached the home of the Stevensons he was admitted, but soon became violent in his language, and after making threats, the women say, was ejected from the house by Stevenson and young Gentry. Irvin left, vowing, it is said, to take vengeance on his wife and the whole family.

In about half an hour another rap was heard at the door and young Gentry answered the call. At the opening of the door two shots rang out and Gentry fell with a bullet wound in the abdomen. The second shot just missed striking J. H. McCord of Denver, brother-in-law of Stevenson, who had accompanied his wife from the west.

Immediately after the shooting Irvin ran, making no effort to molest others of the family.

APPROPRIATE

It Is Thus the President Considered This Particular Present.

Washington, Dec. 26.—A specially bound copy of the life of Job was one of the many Christmas presents that came to President Taft. From his appreciative sigh when he first glimpsed at the title of the volume and rifled its illuminated pages it was quite apparent that the president was highly pleased with the gift and did not question its appropriateness. Part of the day he sat in the White House library with the book in his hand, brushing up on the number of bolts that Job wore at various times and on the other calamities that afflicted him before things were finally straightened out and all the black clouds turned inside out to show their sterling silver linings.

It was not known at the White House who sent the life of Job to the president, but written on the fly leaf of the book was this little personal note: "I send you this life of a gentleman who passed through many trials and tribulations before he came into his own."

Their Nest Well Feathered. Chicago, Dec. 26.—One million in gold is Chicago's champion Christmas gift. The recipient of the present was Miss Agnes Patten, daughter of James A. Patten, the Evanston millionaire. Miss Patten yesterday became the bride of Lawrence Russell Wilder. A close friend of the family stated Miss Patten's father had given her $500,000 as a combined Christmas and wedding present and that her fiancé's father duplicated the gift.

FINDS ALL KINDS OF LINEN

Woman Astonished at Size and Variety of Wardrobe of That One Material.

A woman who is always smartly gowned recently resolved to have frocks of all the kinds of linen there are, for her winter sojourn at Nassau, each frock to be trimmed with the lace or handwork of the country from which the linen came. Until she began her unique collection she had no idea of the great variety of linens to be bought or how much ingenuity it would take to carry out her idea. Her list, with accompanying ornamentation, shows how large and varied a wardrobe may be developed from one single kind of material.

On sheer handkerchief linen of Irish weaving baby Irish crochet was used in profusion, and with a natural color butters' linen of English make, broderie Anglaise or eyelet embroidery appeared. With an oyster white Flemish hand loom linen some heavy Flanders lace in Van Dyke point was inset, and on unbleached hand loom Holland linen was embroidered in Delft blue linen thread. India mull from the Orient showed exquisite hand embroidery, as did the diaphanous linens of China and Japan and those from the Philippines.

Java and Madeira sent hand drawn work and embroidery combined. Mexican work appeared on an elaborate morning dress of medium weight linen, and on the coat of a Russian crash walking costume were cuffs and a collar of Russian lace. Bulgarian linen, brightly embroidered, was made up into a smart little bridge dress, and a charming dinner dress for club wear was of Italian linen with Cluny of great beauty and lavishly inset.

NO REASON FOR IT

When Rushville Citizens Show the Way.

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of serious kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that these ills can be cured. Read what a Rushville citizen says:

Mrs. W. A. Whyte, 824 North Arthur street, Rushville, Ind., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in our family and we have found them to be a splendid remedy for kidney complaint. A member of our family suffered from attacks of backache for several years, the trouble being disordered kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to our attention and thinking they might prove of benefit, we procured a supply at F. B. Johnson & Co.'s Drug Store. The use of two boxes entirely relieved the backache and strengthened the kidneys. I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills at that time and I still take pleasure in saying a good word for them."

Smart Blouses

FOR the first foulard of rather a large pattern is used; it is cut Magyar, and fastens at left side of front. The collar and cuffs are faced with pink silk, the front and cuffs being trimmed with buttons and cord loops. The square open front is filled in with a vest of finely tucked nylon.

Materials required: One and one-quarter yard forty-two inches wide, five-eighths twenty-two inches wide, three-eighths yard tucked nylon.

The second is an over-bodice with silk of lace; the material used is voile of the same color as the skirt, it is strapped with silk at the edge, and trimmed with buttons. The underslip is, by universal preference, composed of cream lace, with cuffs of tucked voile.

Materials required: One yard voile forty-two inches wide, one and three-quarters yard lace eighteen inches wide. Next is of striped silk in shades of grey with white ground; it is cut Magyar, and opens in front to show a small vest of lace; the edge is strapped with silk in narrower stripes in same colors, the under-sleeves are of lace.

Materials required: Two yards twenty-two inches wide, one-half yard narrow stripe twenty-two inches wide, five-eighths yard lace eighteen inches wide.

The last is in silk spotted voile, trimmed with silk embroidered net, in which various colors are introduced. Small tucks are made each side front and back, also in the bend of sleeve.

Materials required: One and one-half yard forty-two inches wide, one-half yard eighteen-inch net.

wonders of Swiss hand work on very fine sheer linen, and another of hand spun German linen, with insertings of old Mechlin in the bodice and much hemstitching in connection with embroidered dots. From Norway came a frock of medium weight linen with cutwork of intricate effect, and from Spain a very coarse open linen canvas inset with lace crocheted by the peasants of the hills.

Each dress is absolutely different from the others, and the planning has given many interesting hours to the woman who will wear them.

Tiny colored silk handkerchiefs with hemstitched borders are very smart worn in the vest pocket of one's tailored suits. Many of these pockets, by the way, are set in lengthwise on a seam instead of crosswise between seams.

Latest Sweater.

The latest thing in sweaters are first cousins to the fuzzy wuzzy tam-o-shanters that abounded some five years back. They look like goats and camels, for "they are wild and they are woolly," with a sheen and a long beard nap, all combed out smooth and shiny—until one buys them, then they will probably gather up in lumps, but they will continue to be just as warm and comfortable and much softer than the regular worsted ones.

Chic Kerchiefs.

Very small handkerchiefs of colored silk with a hemstitched border are sold to wear in the breast pocket of one's rough morning coat. The color scheme of the costume can be carried out by this small touch in a most effective manner, and the idea has been taken up by the Americans who are now in Paris.

ROPES OF HUMAN HAIR

We are constantly getting some of our cherished ideas shattered by research. One of the stories which was not always accepted as an axiom relates to the ladies of Carthage, who, we were taught, cut off their hair, offered their tresses in the temples of the gods and then turned them into ropes for the warships when their country was threatened. The news now comes from Antwerp, through a French source, that a manufacturer in that city has turned his attention to this method of rope making. He asserts that human hair possesses great durability, a strand can lift just three-quarters of a ton, and another advantage is that such a rope does not stretch. The Amsterdam manufacturer's idea is to use his hair ropes for aeroplanes in place of wire stays.

Every family has need of a good, reliable liniment. For sprains, bruises, soreness of the muscles and rheumatic pains there is none better than Chamberlain's. Sold by all Dealers threatened my life. And he did take him—dead.

"I wish everybody to understand that Mr. Tarplee was the kindest of husbands and the most loving of fathers, and nothing to him seemed too good for the children and me, and his death is the greatest loss we could ever experience. It has left me a penniless widow and has lost the education of two innocent babes."

The body of Mr. Tarplee was sent to Canton, Ga., his old home for interment. His father, from Rushville, Ind., arrived Friday and accompanied the remains to the place of interment.

After examining about a score of witnesses yesterday afternoon at the two o'clock inquest Coroner Brasher ordered Sergeant Buckalew held for the grand jury under a $500 bond for manslaughter. The bond was made at once.

C. McAllen, manager of the Forbes Piano company directed the following letter to The Age-Herald concerning Mr. Tarplee's character:

I feel under obligations as manager of the E. E. Forbes Piano company to state to you for publication what we know regarding S. L. Tarplee who was shot and killed by Sergeant J. M. Buckalew.

Now, regarding any family trouble we know nothing about any, but we wish to say, personally we knew him to be one of the best men that we ever had in our employ. We found him honest and reliable in every way. He came here in 1910, the first day of August, and took charge of our shop as head foreman, and filled the same position until a month or so ago, when Tarplee wished to change his position, and do outside tuning, and we also used him to set up pipe organs for us.

It was a great shock to us when we heard of his death; we could not believe that it was he—and we did not believe it until we went to the undertakers and saw him laid out.

He was a man who was well liked by every employee of this store; he never was known to have any trouble with any one of the boys, and was a man who always spoke highly of his family in every way, and it is with great sorrow that we regret that he is lost from our midst.

We further wish to say, before the question and the cause of Mr. Tarplee's death being settled and the matter dropped, a most thorough investigation should be made, to know the real state of affairs. I myself feel personally interested, and, for one, am determined to know why such a rash act had to be done.

Sessions will be held morning, afternoon and night, and the Lewisville band will furnish music during the whole day. Mr. Martindale of Winkleson has consented to be the principal speaker. All who have heard him speak of him in glowing terms. The committee in charge will soon arrange the program in detail. A. W. Toms is chairman of the committee; Arthur Johnson, secretary and I. M. Fletcher is vice president. All corn raisers are urged to participate in the corn show.

GETS A PERSONAL LETTER FROM OTIS

Straughn Man Receives Communication of Plant Destroyed by McNamara.

SERVED UNDER HIM IN WAR

James L. Willis of Straughn has received a letter from Harrison Gray Otis, manager of the Los Angeles Times, whose newspaper plant was wrecked by the McNamara brothers, now serving sentences at San Quentin, the California State prison.

Otis was Mr. Willis' captain during the Civil war, and was a brigadier-general in the Philippine war, being the general who captured Aguinaldo, the Philippine leader. He carried Willis in his arms from the field of battle when the latter was wounded at Lynchburg, Va., and laid him under a beech tree. The southerner who wounded Willis in this battle stood but fifteen feet from him, and was shot down later. Mr. Willis states that the corpse looked good to him—the only good looking corpse he had ever seen.

Willis has corresponded with Otis ever since the closing days of the war and now has his photograph.

SIXTH DISTRICT IS HIS TERRITORY

Louis Ludlow Writes in Star James E. Watson is to Rally Taft Cohorts.

FOG IN THE LAFOLLETTE CAMP

Louis Ludlow, Washington correspondent for the Indianapolis Star, writes as follows concerning political conditions in the Sixth district:

The interview which James E. Watson gave after his return to Indiana, just after being reinstated in favor at the White House, was construed between the lines as indicating that he had his enthusiasm well under control, but on the whole, the administration leaders say they are satisfied with the situation in Indiana.

The administration view is that Wayne county is the weakest place in the Taft lines in Indiana, and former Representative Watson will be expected to give valuable aid in ironing out the rough places in that county and in seeing that the Sixth district sends two Taft delegates to the national convention.

There is a thick, heavy fog of gloom in the LaFollette camp over the demonstration in various parts of the country in favor of Col. Roosevelt, and especially over preparations to start the Roosevelt boom going all over the country after the holidays.

EAGER CHILDREN ARE MADE HAPPY

despite the efforts of the little boy and girl to keep from displaying their feelings. That was too much for the men delivering. After all of the delivering was finished, two bundles were provided and carried to this house, a distance of almost a mile away, where nothing but gloom and disappointment was apparent. There were glad times after the arrival of the bundles.

It appeared this year that poverty in Rushville is not as common as it was the first year the Santa Claus fund was operated. It is true that as many worthy children were found but the conditions in which they live are much better.

Most of the credit for the happiness which was brought to the little folks is due to Mrs. A. L. Stewart and Mrs. T. W. Betker. They worked untiringly in preparing the list of children. They investigated every case with which they were not familiar before the names of the children were placed on the list. This took most of Mrs. Betker's and Mrs. Stewart's time for the last two weeks. Besides they did much of the buying. They arranged all of the names according to ages so the bundles could be wrapped hurriedly and then prepared another list which was used in delivering. The Tri Kappas, together with Miss Maude Hunt, wrapped the bundles last Friday.

Allen Blackledge was the only person who donated an automobile for the delivery. Two other machines were promised but the owners decided at the last moment Monday that they would not turn their autos into mud boats. Two wagons were rented at a livery stable in order to expedite the delivery and it was all finished by noon.
